GOUDA TO THE LAST DROP

Dutch Cheese Soup Recipe

INGREDIENTS: 1 onion, 2 carrots, 2 celery stalks, 3 cloves garlic, 6 cups cauliflower florets, 3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, divided, salt and ground white pepper to taste, 1 bay leaf, 6 cups chicken broth, 2 cups grated gouda, 1 teaspoon mustard (Dijon-style or English) ¼ cup half-and-half, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 sprig fresh rosemary, chopped coarsely and 2 to 3 thin slices of prosciutto, julienned

PREPARATION: Roughly chop the onion, carrots, celery and garlic and combine with the cauliflower, 1 tablespoon of the olive oil and salt and pepper in a large soup pot. Cook over medium heat until vegetables soften, and onions become translucent, about 20-25 minutes.

Add the bay leaf and chicken broth and bring to a simmer. Cover and cook for 15 to 20 minutes. Remove the bay leaf and purée soup until smooth.

Just prior to serving the soup, stir in the gouda, mustard, half-and-half and butter. Taste and season with salt and pepper if needed. Continue cooking until cheese has melted and soup is smooth, 1 to 2 minutes.

In a small pan, heat remaining tablespoon of olive oil over medium-high heat and quickly fry the rosemary and prosciutto until crispy and aromatic.

Divide soup into bowls and garnish with the rosemary and prosciutto.

Makes 8-10 servings.

Czech Out Prague—"Na zdraví" ("To your health")

Prague is "the golden city of a hundred spires." Because this vibrant Baroque capital escaped the bombs of the last century's wars, it's remarkably well-preserved. But it didn't avoid the heavy, deadening economic and political blanket of communism. It's hard for today's visitors to imagine the gray and bleak Prague of the communist era. Before 1989, the city was a wistful jumble of lost opportunities. Sooty, crusty buildings shadowed cobbled lanes. Thick, dark timbers bridging narrow streets kept decrepit buildings from crumbling. Consumer goods were plain and uniform, stacked like bricks on thin shelves in shops where customers waited in line for a beat-up cabbage, tin of ham, or bottle of ersatz Coke. The Charles Bridge was as sooty as its statues, with a few shady characters trying to change money. Hotels had two-tiered pricing: one for people of the Warsaw Pact nations and another for capitalists. This made the run-down, Soviet--style hotels as expensive for most tourists as fine hotels in Western Europe. At the train station, frightened but desperate characters would meet arriving foreigners to rent them a room in their flat. They were scrambling to get enough hard Western cash to buy Today, that's all ancient history. The people of Prague are as free and capitalistic as any other citizens of the European Union. They wear their Levi's oblivious to how they were once the pants of dreams. The city is fun — slinky with sumptuous Art Nouveau facades, offering tons of cheap Mozart and Vivaldi concerts, and still brewing some of the best beer in Europe.

Nancy,

I look forward to Fridays as the end of the work week. And now since getting your calendar of events email there is another reason to look forward to Fridays. Thanks for the many helpful hints and for the brief escape I get when reading the many vacation packages you offer.

Thanks
