Grilled Corn Chowder

4 ears sweet corn, husked

1 small red bell pepper, cored and cut into 4 planks

1 bunch scallions (6 to 7), trimmed

Extra-virgin olive oil, for brushing

Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper

2 tablespoons unsalted butter

1 pound new potatoes, cut into 1/2-inch chunks

2 stalks celery, chopped

3 tablespoons all-purpose flour

2 teaspoons fresh thyme leaves

1/2 teaspoon smoked paprika

4 cups vegetable broth or low-sodium chicken broth

3/4 cup heavy cream

1/4 cup fresh Italian parsley leaves, chopped

Hot sauce, for serving, optional

- Prepare a grill for medium heat.
- Brush the corn, bell pepper and scallions lightly with olive oil. Season with salt and pepper. Grill, turning as needed, until the vegetables are charred and just tender, 8 to 10 minutes for the corn, about 6 minutes for the peppers and 2 to 3 minutes for the scallions. Let cool.
- Cut the corn kernels from the cobs and place it in a medium bowl. Chop the bell pepper. Finely chop the scallions, keeping the white parts separated from the green parts.
- Melt the butter in a medium Dutch oven over medium heat. Add the scallion whites, potatoes and celery. Cook, stirring occasionally, until the celery softens, 3 to 4 minutes.
- Sprinkle in the flour, thyme, paprika, 1 teaspoon salt and several grinds of black pepper. Stir until the flour evenly coats the vegetables, about 1 minute. Add the broth and 1 cup water and whisk to combine. Bring to a simmer, adjust the heat and simmer until the potatoes are almost tender, 8 to 10 minutes.
- Stir in the corn, peppers and cream and return to a rapid simmer. Cook until the soup is thickened and the vegetables are tender, 8 to 10 minutes. Season with more salt and pepper if desired. Stir in the scallion greens and parsley. Serve with hot sauce if using.

What's the difference between TSA Precheck, Global Entry, and Clear?

TSA Precheck, Global Entry, and Clear are all expedited screening programs that help you get through U.S. airport security checkpoints faster. The main difference is that TSA Precheck and Clear save you time at the initial TSA security screening, while Global Entry speeds up the process at customs after you return to the U.S. from an international destination. Global Entry costs $100 and includes TSA Precheck, whereas Precheck on its own is $85. Both fees are often reimbursed or covered by travel credit cards and both programs are valid for five years.

Clear, which relies on biometric technology to pre-verify ID checks, allows travelers to go directly to baggage screening at TSA checkpoints (though you'll still need TSA Precheck if you want to avoid the general security line altogether). Clear is also present in several stadiums and event venues, like Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles and Citi Field in New York City, throughout the United States, extending membership benefits beyond the airport. Clear costs $179 per year, but AFAR readers can get it for just $149 per year with the promo code "AFF149".

If you're not sure which one to get, we recommend applying for Global Entry since you can enroll in TSA Precheck at the same time for an additional $15, essentially bundling the two programs. The only downside is that appointment times for Global Entry application interviews at larger, more trafficked airports can be hard to get (especially now, thanks to COVID-related delays). Interview appointments for Global Entry at smaller airports or for TSA Precheck only are much easier to find.

If your home airport is one of 33 with Clear and you're a frequent traveler, the program is worth signing up for on top of Global Entry and TSA Precheck—especially if you've noticed your TSA Precheck lines slowly growing as more people get approved and join the program.

TSA Precheck overview

First implemented in 2011, TSA Precheck serves as a way to screen travelers before they arrive at the airport and allow them access to expedited screening through security lanes in more than 200 airports. In TSA Precheck lines, there's no need to remove your shoes, belt, or light jacket. Liquids and electronics like tablets and laptops can also stay in your bag, saving travelers time and hassle. Children 12 and under can also go through the expedited line with a guardian who has TSA Precheck.

How do you get TSA Precheck?

To apply for TSA Precheck, travelers must undergo a background screening and pay the $85 fee for five years of membership. Many credit cards, such as the Chase Sapphire Reserve, Citi Prestige, and American Express Platinum, will refund the $85 application fee if you pay for it with the card. This is typically an annual benefit, and after you use it for yourself the first year, you can pay for a friend or family member's application using your card to have it waived too.

There are numerous global enrollment centers, most often at airports, and the fee is worth it for frequent travelers given the shorter lines and streamlined screening process.

How does TSA Precheck work?

Once enrolled, you will be assigned a Known Traveler Number (KTN) that verifies your TSA Precheck approval status. You can then add the KTN to your frequent flier accounts to make sure it's applied every time you purchase an airline ticket. Alternatively, you can enter your KTN during the checkout process.

Most domestic airlines and a growing roster of international carriers participate in this program, but it only works on flights within or departing from the United States.

If you have successfully entered your KTN, the TSA Precheck logo will appear on your boarding pass, which indicates that you are eligible for expedited screening through the Precheck line at airport security.

If you're approved for Precheck but don't see it on your boarding pass, ask an airline agent to try re-entering your KTN or double-check that it has been entered through your airline's app. Sometimes, the number doesn't "stick" when the airline reservation is made.

Renewing TSA Precheck

After five years, you can renew TSA Precheck online—simply fill out a form and pay the $85 fee again, ideally with a credit card that will reimburse you for it. Members will receive a letter when their KTN is about to expire, but you can also submit a Service Status form to find out online.

Global Entry overview

Global Entry is designed to provide expedited re-entry into the United States by helping international travelers clear customs faster. It is available at more than 50 U.S. airports, costs $100 to apply (though the CBP has proposed raising the fee to $120), and is valid for five years.

If you are approved, Global Entry includes TSA Precheck for no additional fee, so you don't have to apply separately for it. Everyone who has Global Entry gets TSA Precheck, but not everyone who has TSA Precheck qualifies for Global Entry. As with TSA Precheck, many credit cards provide fee waivers to cover the application fee for Global Entry.

How do you get Global Entry?

Global Entry has a thorough application process that involves a background check and in-person interview after preliminary approval. To schedule an in-person interview, you can book an appointment online—though many airports are experiencing long delays and in some cases the next available appointment may be months out. Those who have been conditionally approved, however, can save time by getting an interview through the “Enrollment on Arrival” program—which is essentially a walk-in appointment available after landing in an international terminal at a participating airport.

Even after completing all the required steps, though, not everyone will be approved for the program. Those with a criminal history, for example, may not be approved for Global Entry. All Global Entry members must follow the rules and regulations of international travel, including being aware of what they are permitted to bring back to the country. Even the most minor infractions, such as not declaring a piece of fruit when re-entering the United States, could result in the loss of Global Entry.

How does Global Entry work?

By scanning fingerprints and answering questions at a Global Entry kiosk, travelers bypass longer queues during the customs process and typically do not have to speak to an immigration officer.

Renewing Global Entry

Travelers can renew Global Entry online starting one year before expiration. Some people will have to be interviewed again.

Because CBP is experiencing a backlog of new and renewal applications, it is currently offering a two-year grace period for travelers whose Global Entry has expired. As long as you submit your application for renewal before it expires, the extension will allow you to use Global Entry for two years beyond its expiration date.
