GLOBUS

FAMILY OF BRANDS

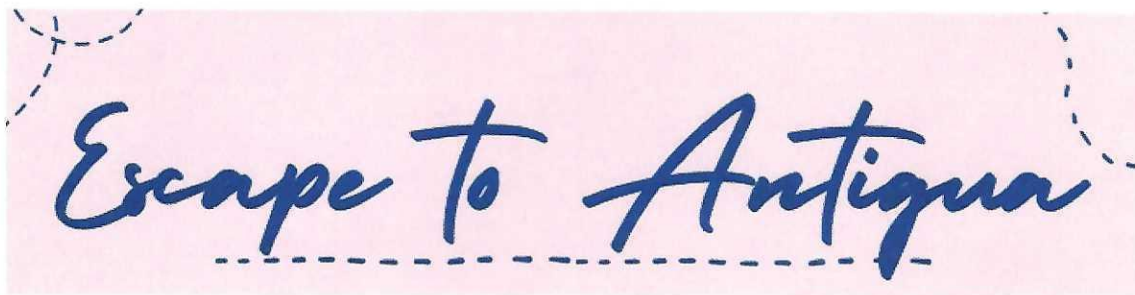

UPDATED

COVID-19

VACCINE POLICY

The Globus family of brands announced today that we will lift our policy requiring all guests to be fully vaccinated against COVID-19. Guests booking a vacation that begins on or after March 1, 2023, will no longer need to be vaccinated against COVID-19 to travel on a Globus or Cosmos tour or Avalon Waterways cruise.

Of this policy change, President and CEO Scott Nisbet said the following, “The health and safety of our guests remains our top priority and while we highly recommend that travelers are vaccinated against COVID-19, after March 1, 2023, we will no longer require it. Destinations and other transportation operators – like airlines – have their own rules and regulations. It will be up to the responsibility of our guests to understand and comply with those policies to move freely across the globe.”

Cancun Eliminates Mandatory Customs Forms for Arriving Tourists

Government officials in Cancun announced the destination has ended the need for arriving travelers to fill out customs (FMM) forms and granted Americans a fast-track entry process.

According to the Cancun Sun, many travelers who didn't complete the Forma Multipla Migratoria (FMM) paperwork online were forced to complete the documents in person, causing delays at airport security and immigration checkpoints.

The government will now issue travelers from the United States and other approved countries a stamp instead of the previously required card. The card would need to be presented as travelers departed Mexico, with visitors footing a $25 fee if they lost it.

Now, approved travelers will be granted a residence permit for 180 days. The government is working to streamline the entry process for tourists as part of an effort to ease the workload for airport employees, as staff shortages continue to impact the industry

Earlier this month, Mexico's Ministry of Tourism revealed that the country hosted approximately 25.4 million international visitors between January and May, more than 5.2 million more than 2021, representing an increase of 25.9 percent.

Royal Caribbean to Welcome Unvaccinated Travelers, Ease Testing Requirements

Royal Caribbean International announced new coronavirus-related protocols to align the company with the broader travel industry standards.

Starting on September 5, the cruise line will welcome both unvaccinated and vaccinated travelers aboard its ships, as long as all passengers follow the updated rules and requirements.

The new guidelines include unvaccinated guests being required to show a negative COVID-19 test rest before their voyage. Vaccinated travelers will not be required to take a coronavirus test on sailings of nine nights or less.

Royal Caribbean also revealed guests five years old and younger have no vaccine or testing requirements for all sailings. Passengers on voyages of 10-plus nights will be required to provide a negative test within three days of their sailing date, regardless of their vaccination status.

Local restrictions still remain in place, so the company confirmed that sailings to or from Australia, Bermuda, Canada and Singapore would require guests to be vaccinated.

The cruise line continues to practice health and safety measures, including the routine monitoring and vaccination of all crew members and keeping them up to date with boosters when they are eligible, enhanced testing and care capabilities in every onboard medical center and more.

In July, the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) released a new set of recommendations for the cruise industry, just days after ending the COVID-19 Program for Cruise Ships.

As a result, many cruise lines have made amendments to their vaccination and testing requirements, including easing bans on unvaccinated travelers and lifting stringent testing protocols before voyages.
