Potato Chip-Crusted Chicken Strips with Honey Mustard Dipping Sauce

Chicken:

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons garlic powder
- 2 teaspoons onion powder
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon ground mustard
- Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 3 large eggs
- 16 to 20 ounces your favorite BBQ or salt and vinegar potato chips
- 2 pounds boneless chicken breast, cut into strips

Honey Mustard Sauce:

- 1/2 cup honey
- 5 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1/4 cup Dijon mustard 1 tablespoon yellow mustard
- 1 tablespoon whole-grain mustard
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder Kosher salt

Directions: For the chicken: Preheat the oven to 450 degrees F. Line a baking sheet with parchment.

In a bowl or baking dish, add the flour, garlic powder onion powder, paprika, ground mustard and 2 teaspoons each salt and pepper and stir to combine. Beat the eggs in a separate baking dish.

Finely crush the potato chips in their bag or in a separate re-sealable bag. Pour into a bowl or baking dish. Sprinkle the chicken with 2 teaspoons salt. Dip the chicken in the seasoned flour a coat completely, then into the egg mixture until completely coated. Finally, dip the chicken into the potato chips, making sure the chips stick to the whole surface. Transfer the chicken to the prepared baking sheet.

Bake, flipping halfway through, until the chicken is golden brown and reaches an internal temperature of 165 degrees F, about 20 minutes.

For the honey mustard sauce: While the chicken is baking, mix together the honey, mayonnaise, Dijon, yellow mustard, whole-grain mustard and garlic powder in a small bowl. Season with salt as desired. Serve with the chicken.

WINTER in Fairbanks

Despite the subzero temps (winter temperatures can dip to -20 degrees Fahrenheit), the darkest months of the year are when Fairbanks shine, literally. Because Fairbanks sits directly below the auroral oval (a naturally occurring atmospheric band that hugs the northernmost climes and denotes where auroral activity is most likely to occur), it is an ideal staging point for watching one of nature's greatest shows: the northern lights. According to Explore Fairbanks, the local tourism board, streamers of light unfurl over the interior of Alaskan city an average of 240 nights per year.

If you want to stack the deck in your favor (especially as we approach a solar maximum), companies like Salmon Berry Tours and Last Frontier Mushing Co-op can lead the way.

During the day, visitors can check out the University of Alaska's Museum of the North, which displays Indigenous artwork, a mummified bison from the Ice Age, and the famous Into the Wild bus. If you're keen on spending time outside, Running Reindeer Ranch leads guided hikes through the boreal forest, a place that features a herd of domesticated reindeer. A visit to Chena Hot Springs Resort is also a must, if only for the 106-degree, spring-fed outdoor soaking pool.

On 100 acres of boreal forest just north of Fairbanks, Borealis Basecamp is a truly intimate stay. Guests have interesting options for lodging: one of its private fiberglass igloos (much like the kind used by polar research stations) with a see-through ceiling, or one of its cubes that feature floor-to-ceiling windows. You can't go wrong with either option, as you'll be able to watch the northern lights from the comfort of your bed in both spots.
