

The Louvre will get a major redesign to take on overtourism

The iconic Louvre in Paris is no stranger to crowds. Since first opening in 1793, the museum has played host to millions of guests and undergone dozens of expansions and renovations to accommodate them. Today, though, overtourism has brought the historic site to a breaking point.

In a typical year, the Louvre is prepared to accommodate 4 million visitors. But in 2024, almost 9 million people—70% of them originating from outside of France—passed through its doors.

Now the Louvre will now undergo a massive renovation to address overcrowding and expand its viewing capacity to 12 million annual visitors, French President Emmanuel Macron has announced. The ambitious project includes opening a new entrance on the Seine river, and dedicating a stand-alone room to house the Mona Lisa by Leonardo da Vinci, to give the famed Italian Renaissance painting some breathing room.

There isn't room for visitors to take a break, according to des Cars, who also assessed the museum's food and restroom facilities as "insufficient in volume." She added in her memo that some areas of the museum are prone to leaks, while others experience wide temperature variations, potentially impacting the preservation of the artwork within. The Louvre's signage needs to be redesigned as well, des Cars asserted.

The Louvre currently has only one entrance—the iconic glass pyramid by architect I.M. Pei, opened in 1989. Overcrowding of the thoroughway in recent years has led to both a greenhouse-like heating effect and unpleasant sound amplification.

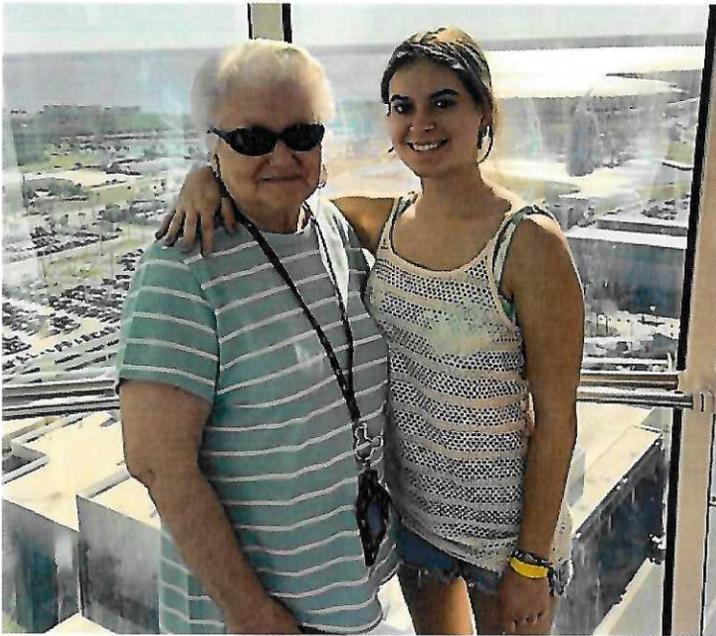

A similar issue has plagued staffers guarding the Mona Lisa. Around 20,000 people pack into the room housing the famous painting each day, resulting in massive lines and far-from-ideal viewing conditions (if you can even get close enough to catch a glimpse).

At a speech delivered in front of the Mona Lisa on Tuesday, Macron introduced a plan to bring the fun back to the Louvre. In short: improve the flow of foot traffic throughout the space in order to prevent major backups.

To start, Macron announced, the renovation will include a new grand entrance at the Colonnade de Perrault on the museum's western side near the Seine, finally adding an additional pathway for guests to enter the building, and relieving crowding at the pyramid entrance. The Louvre will hold a competition to choose the firm responsible for the addition, which is slated to open in 2031.

Several underground rooms will be added to boost exhibition space. And the museum will relocate its pièce de résistance—the Mona Lisa—to its own dedicated room. That room will require a separate access pass and be "independently accessible compared to the rest of the museum," Macron said.

In response to the issue of overtourism, the museum will also institute higher prices for foreign travelers. Starting on January 1, 2026, Macron announced, all guests from outside the EU will be required to pay a higher entrance fee.

MaryAnn and Gabbi's Cruise

March 2025

Grandma and I ma and I went on a 7-day Bahamas cruise aboard Royal Caribbean's Odyssey of the Seas. It was a wonderful experience, from the ease of check-in to the cleanliness of my stateroom and overall ship amenities to the friendliness of the staff, to the ship's stops and excursions. I had the most amazing time, most of all spending time with my Grany. We made so many memories while on this trip that I will cherish for a lifetime.

One of my favorite things that we did was the dolphin excursion in Nassau, Bahamas on the Blue Lagoon island. This was one of the things that I was most excited about since I had never met a dolphin in person before, and my expectations were far exceeded beyond what I could've imagined. We also went on a Snorkeling excursion while on Royal Caribbean's private island CocoCay which was awesome. On this one, I was able to see so many different kinds of fish, including a pufferfish and even a barracuda (which swam away, phew), a sunken plane wreck, and a small reef.

Thank you Nancy and Hometown for this unforgettable experience.

Crispy Air Fryer Chicken Thighs

Juicy, tender dark-meat chicken with the crispiest skin in less than twenty minutes—who could ask for anything more? Serve these lightly seasoned chicken thighs as is, or toss them while still hot with your favorite barbecue or buffalo sauce to give this quick and easy anytime meal an extra kick.

Level: Easy
Total: 35 min
Active: 10 min
Yield: 4 servings

Ingredients:

- 1 teaspoon granulated garlic (or garlic powder)
- 1 teaspoon onion powder
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1/2 teaspoon smoked paprika
- Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 4 bone-in, skin on chicken thighs (about 2 pounds)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

Directions:

Special equipment: a 3.5-quart air fryer

- 1 Mix together the granulated garlic, onion powder, thyme, paprika, 2 teaspoons salt and 1/2 teaspoon pepper in a small bowl. Pat the chicken dry and add to a medium bowl. Add the olive oil and half of the spice mix, then toss to combine.
- 2 Add the flour to the remaining spice mix and stir to combine. Transfer the flour mixture to a large resealable bag. Add the seasoned thighs to the bag, seal well and toss until the chicken is fully coated in the flour.
- 3 Preheat a 3.5-quart air fryer to 400 degrees F. Add the chicken thighs to the air fryer basket, skin-side down and without touching. Cook, flipping skin-side up halfway through, until an instant-read thermometer inserted into thickest part (avoiding the bone) reads 165 degrees F, about 18 minutes. Let rest for 5 minutes before serving.
